Siniša Skočibušić

MD, MSc

Bosnia and Herzegovina

He was born on July 4, 1981, in Mostar, Bosnia and Herzegovina. From a young age, he showed a keen interest in learning and research, coupled with social engagement. After completing his studies at the University of Mostar's Medical School, where he delved deep into the world of medicine, he spent six years acquiring fundamental knowledge and skills that would later be crucial for his specialization and professional development.

Continuing on his scientific journey, he completed a master's postgraduate program in "Medical Care and Public Health" at the Medical School of the University of Mostar, expanding his knowledge and competencies in medical management and public health.

Immersed in the world of infectious diseases, he gained necessary experience and skills in Mostar and Zagreb. After successfully passing his specialist exam in 2012, his path led him to subspecialization in intensive care medicine, which required additional years of dedication and effort. He selflessly applied his knowledge and skills to help overcome the challenges of the COVID-19 pandemic at the University Clinical Hospital in Mostar.

In addition to his professional progress, he is dedicated to educating future physicians through various positions at the Department of Infectious Diseases at the Medical School in Mostar, where he generously works with young generations of medical and dental students.

Since 2015, he has been the director of the Center Prevention and Outpatient Treatment for Addiction Mostar, where his strong commitment has yielded remarkable results in organizing work and improving relationships with heroin addicts, one of the socially vulnerable groups.

He continues to develop his expertise and knowledge through various forms of education, including participation in international medical seminars and training programs, as well as international visits, allowing him to broaden his perspective and exchange experiences with colleagues from around the world. As an active member of various professional societies, his involvement in numerous organizations contributes to the dissemination of professional knowledge and the exchange of best practices.

The story of his dedication to medicine and continuous professional advancement, shaped by diverse experiences and education, always striving for further multidisciplinary contributions to medicine and society, continues as he works as a director of the Institute of Public Health of the Federation of Bosnia and Herzegovina, serving the community and promoting public health.
